Important information about opening a new account

To help the government fight the funding of terrorism and money laundering activities, Federal law requires all financial institutions to obtain, verify, and record information that identifies each person who opens an account.

What this means for you...

When you open an account, we will ask for your name, address, date of birth, and other information that will allow us to identify you. We will also ask to see your government issued picture identification such as a driver's license, passport, military identification or other identifying documents.

"Under the penalties of perjury, I certify (1) that the number shown at the top of this form is my correct taxpayer identification number and (2) that I am not subject to backup withholding either because I have not been notified that I am subject to backup withholding as a result of a failure to report all interest or dividends, or the Internal Revenue Service has notified me that I am no longer subject to backup withholding."

"The Internal Revenue Service does not require your consent to any provisions of this document other than the certifications required to avoid backup withholding."

STATUTORY LIEN. Pursuant to 12U.S.C. 1757, the Credit Union has a right to impress and enforce a statutory lien against your account shares, deposits and dividends, if you are in default on any loan indebtedness or other financial obligation to the Credit Union. The federal law gives the Credit Union the right to apply the balance of shares and dividends in your account(s) at the time of default to satisfy the financial obligation. The Credit Union may exercise this right without further notice to you, once you are in default. The lien applies to the financial obligations of members who are primarily, secondarily or otherwise responsible for an outstanding financial obligation to the Credit Union, including, without limitation an obligor, maker, co maker, guarantor, co signer, endorser, surety or accommodation party. This means a lien can be impressed and enforced against the shares and dividends of a guarantor or other accommodation party.
